1. Policy Name:

The Information and Media Policy of the Royal Government of Bhutan.

2. Scope of the policy:

This policy covers mainstream news media, the creative arts and emerging media like social media

3.Rationale:

The constitution of Bhutan guarantees freedom of expression, freedom of media, and right to information. This is the premise of Bhutan's media policy, which will then expand on the role of media in achieving national goals.

Bhutan more than any other country has taken a deliberate path to development using the notion of Gross National Happiness (GNH). Perhaps Bhutan's best known intellectual gift to the rest of the world, GNH is also the best example of how the country sees the purpose of development not merely an economic pursuit, but more a self- actualization of individuals in the collective. The premise is that the ultimate aspiration of every human being is happiness.

Taking GNH seriously means that media development has to be viewed through the perspective of GNH principles. This is unique in the world. On the one hand, it offers exciting possibilities of "thinking out of the box" and exploring alternative paths of developing the media. On the other hand, as a unique case, such a notion is as challenging as it is trail-blazing; there is no example to follow. The path of media development therefore has to be trod cautiously with continuous monitoring and analysis, as the situation develops to be sure that Bhutan remains on the right track.

The media laws and policies that were instituted in 2008 have had several years to work themselves out and it is now timely to review them. It is important that Bhutan learns from its own media experience of the past five years as the Bhutanese media attempted to play a significant contributory role in the pioneering years of the democratic process.

This policy is intended to provide a policy vision to guide media development. The policy builds on the various studies, assessments, seminars and meetings conducted on the role of the Bhutanese media. Among the more important of these sources of information on the media are: the Information and Media Policy of the Royal Government of Bhutan and Institutional Plan for Department of Information and Media (approved by the 246th CCM Session, 23 November 2004), Bhutan Media Impact Study 2008 and 2013, Media Development Assessment 2010. Underlying this policy is the continuing refinement of GNH as an operating concept in the governance of Bhutan. Documents and material representing the discourse on GNH were important in providing the context as well as direction for this policy.

Policy recommendations are based on GNH values and principles that are carefully explicated to avoid ambiguity.

The objectives of the proposed policy are:

- I. Achieve professional and sustainable media industry.
- II. Preserve and promote Bhutan's culture and traditions through media.
- III. Create a vibrant media industry that upholds highest ethical standards through training of media professionals and establishing oversight body like media council.
- IV. Enhance responsible and accountable democratic discourse through media platforms in creating a vibrant democratic governance.
- V. Ensure that the media promote GNH values instead of solely and only being guided and driven by commercialism.
- VI. Enhance equal opportunities to all with access to media and right to information.
- VII. Guide and promote the evolution of information and media in Bhutan.
- VIII. Promote sharing of Infrastructure.
- IX. Promote shared values as a national consciousness through responsible media.

4. Definitions

The following are some of the definitions:

- Cross media ownership: means ownership in different media businesses.
- Media literacy: refers to the ability to access, analyze, evaluate and create media messages.
- Self- and co-regulation: Self-regulation is the regulation of an industry by the industry. Where government is involved in any aspect of self-regulation, it is termed co-regulation.

5. Policy Statement:

5.1 Gross National Happiness:

5.1.1. The media shall support the values of GNH including its vision of democracy and human well-being.

5.2 Governance of Media:

5.2.1 The polices, laws, rules and administrative processes relating to the media shall promote the watchdog role of the media.

5.2.2 Periodic audits of media shall be conducted for purposes of confirming circulation, readership, reach and viewership.

5.2.3 A Media Council shall be formed as a part of the move to promote responsible and independent media.

5.3 Media's Role:

5.3.1 The media should educate and inform the public and serve the public platform for discourse that is open and accessible to all.

5.3.2 Commercialism should not be the primary goal of media. The media in turn should support the values of GNH and its vision of democracy and human well-being and not pursue commercialism only. Media are mandated to help develop society, not just themselves.

5.3.3 Media should strengthen national and public responses during all emergencies free of cost.

5.4 Bhutan InfoComm and Media Authority (BICMA):

5.4.1 The autonomy and independence of BICMA as the media regulator should be strengthened.

5.4.2 Decisions that impact stakeholders shall be made by committees rather than individuals.

5.4.3 BICMA should attempt to work with industry through self- or co-regulation. That is, it shall help establish and then work with the Media Council to self-regulate media content including advertising.

5.4.4 BICMA shall conduct/commission regular audits to determine the well-being of the media industry as well as the impact of its work. It shall aim to produce an annual report on the state of the media.

5.4.5 BICMA needs to develop in-house expertise to regulate media competition; including sharing of infrastructure facilities.

5.5 Media and Information Literacy:

5.5.1 The Government shall aim to increase the Media and Information Literate (MIL) population. This means educating Bhutanese citizens beyond reading and writing to understanding how to access, analyze, evaluate and create media messages.

5.5.2 Initiatives in MIL by government, civil society and the private sector should be encouraged.

5.5.3 Integrate MIL into existing education curriculum at relevant levels.

5.6 Sustainable Development of the Media Industry:

5.6.1 An advertisement guideline to ensure that all advertisements are legal, decent, honest and truthful shall be adopted by the media industry. Such a guideline will increase the credibility of advertisements, ensure a level playing field for the media and will help the industry to grow.

5.6.2 The placement of advertisements by the Government shall be done in an objective, fair and transparent manner based on a written guideline.

5.6.3 BICMA shall show audited circulation and reach figures of media houses.

5.6.4 Cost-benefit analysis shall be conducted on a periodic basis to show the efficacy of the advertising money of the Government.

5.6.5 Media shall be encouraged to share common infrastructure facilities such as printing press and broadcast towers.

5.6.6 BICMA shall develop regulations for sharing of infrastructure.

5.6.7 Government will provide incentives for promotion of media and information, they shall be based on criteria's such as performance that will be examined and changed on based on need.

5.7 Preservation of Culture:

5.7.1 Incentives shall be provided to promote GNH values including promotion and development of local content

5.7.2 Archival records shall be made of all media (print, broadcast, audio-visual, performances such as music, films, drama and other entertainment and performing arts), and stored in the National Archives.

5.8 Professionalism of Media:

5.8.1 The Government, particularly the Department of Information and Media in cooperation with the relevant agencies, will conduct trainings for media personnel and explore funds to conduct trainings that are essential to professionalize the skills of media practitioners as per RGoB's existing rules and procedures.

5.9 Reaching the Unreached:

5.9.1 Performance based incentives should be given to all media agencies to improve quality content and encourage rural reach.

5.9.2 In areas unreachable through mainstream media like print and television, community radio and other means to reach the unreached will be promoted.

5.9.3 Promote social cohesion and empower citizens, through access to timely and accurate information.

5.10 Other Policy Recommendations:

5.10.1 Cross media ownership shall be allowed, given technological convergence, to a limited extent while strategically and carefully preventing monopolies. The precise percentage of cross-ownership and of the content type (e.g. would it be just news, or all content) that shall be determined by the Act. Each case would have to be studied by the regulator on its own merits. Rules will need to be developed to prevent market concentration and abuse of market power.

5.10.2 Service providers shall be given limited immunity for third-party content.

5.10.3 A separate social media policy shall be issued and the policy shall include a code of conduct for all citizens and a guideline for the use of social media for good governance.

5.10.4 Regulate social media advertising and marketing with rules based on the advertising code.

5.10.5 The guidelines on “Media Coverage of Elections” drawn up by the Election Commission of Bhutan should be reviewed in consultation with the BICMA & DoIM.

5.10.6 The Government shall migrate from analogue to digital broadcasting following international trends.

6. Legislative Compliance:

6.1.1 BICM Act is the main legislation for media.

6.1.2 Foreign Direct Investment policy stipulates that news media is in the negative list.

7. Implementation Procedure:

The Policy recognizes the vital role that the Government agencies, Regulator, Civil Society and the Media can play for the overall development of the media industry and also in dealing with media related issues. Refer Annexure 1.

8. Monitoring and Evaluation: A periodic monitoring and evaluation will be carried out to keep track of the progress and achievements of Policy objectives.

8.1.1 Ministry of Information and Communications, Department of Information and Media shall have the responsibility for overall monitoring and also to ensure that the objectives of the Policy are successfully achieved

8.1.2 Periodic surveys and studies on the overall state of the media, such as reach and coverage, impact of media and the capacity need assessment for media personnel will be carried out. Based on the recommendations and conclusion of the surveys and studies, intervention in developing the media industry, particularly to achieve those objectives under this policy, will be carried out.

9.Approval Dates:
